When you register for courses offered by Assumption College you are agreeing to pay for the tuition and fees associated with those courses. This constitutes a legal financial obligation. You should be aware of the following:

- Access to your bill is provided online through the TMS student account center. Assumption uses your email address to communicate important updates. However, Assumption or its authorized agents may also contact you by phone, including any cell phone numbers you provide, or mail. You should keep the Registrars' office at Assumption College apprised of any changes in your address, email or phone number(s).
- Assumption College publishes fee schedules as well as policies and procedures regarding changes or cancellation of your registration. You should be aware that non-attendance does not relieve you of your financial responsibility for the courses you sign up for.
- You should also be aware that in the unlikely event that you fail to meet your financial obligations, you may be charged late payment fees. Additionally, if Assumption is required to engage a collection agency to obtain payment, you agree to reimburse Assumption College for any collection agency fees and expenses that may be as high as 40% of the debt.
- Students with outstanding financial obligations cannot register for additional classes and the College will not provide you with an official transcript or diploma while there are amounts outstanding. Student Initials _____
